The Post-Office, inexhaustible at the desk or on the field of duty, has not always been disposed towards collective festivity. The cause may not be very far to seek. Having given to the service of the commonwealth the best of the day, its members not unreasonably fly away to their homes to make the best of the night. So it fell out that the several branches of the PostOffice pursued for many a long year the even tenor of their way, without so much as a thought of jubilation in respect to official toil. The chief clerks had other things to think of; the juniors neither the cash nor the power. However, a change was at hand. The cheers of the million which had saluted the jubilee of her Majesty Queen Victoria were yet in the ears of the people,...
